What makes Great Places in Missouri great?

What makes a neighborhood, street or public space a unique, memorable place that works not only for the community, but also as a model others would want to emulate? Great Places in Missouri singles out places of exemplary character, quality and planning; places with a unique identity, cultural interest, community involvement and a sustainable vision for tomorrow. We all can think of a neighborhood, street, or public place that is unique or memorable, but what makes it special?

How can a Great Places designation benefit your community?

Great Places in Missouri is a way to recognize and honor your community's ongoing commitment to planning and plan implementation, and the role elected officials, community leaders, institutions and citizens play in creating communities that enrich people's lives and offer better choices for where and how people work and live.

Great Places in Missouri are located in all areas of the state. To have streets, neighborhoods, public spaces – or all three categories – designated in your community is a way to gain attention about the benefits, outcomes and lasting value of planning in your community.

Nominate a Great Place in Missouri

APA needs your local expertise, area knowledge and planning perspective to help nominate neighborhoods, streets and public spaces in your community or places you've visited or otherwise know about that you consider outstanding. Your knowledge is critical to identifying and recognizing these exemplary places.

This guidance is designed to help you think about those features, characteristics, qualities and details that separate an ordinary neighborhood, street or public space from one that is extraordinary. Additional information about Great Places can be found on the National APA website at <http://www.planning.org/greatplaces/>. A list of current Missouri designations is available at <https://missouri.planning.org/community-outreach/great-places-missouri/>.

Neighborhoods: Aside from what is mentioned on the APA and Missouri Chapter websites, consider more modern neighborhoods. Although historic neighborhoods and streetcar suburbs meet many of the Great Places criteria, APA is equally interested in more modern and sustainable neighborhoods. Neighborhoods that incorporate infill development or adaptive uses are also desired. If the neighborhood is in a rural or suburban setting, is there any type of public transit nearby? Is there a school located in your neighborhood? Has revitalization of the neighborhood benefited the community economically?

Streets: When considering a street, ask yourself if it accommodates all users – not just motorists but also cyclists and pedestrians? Is the street designated to manage an influx of tourists or other heavy seasonal use as well as local traffic? Designations may involve just a few blocks or something longer, however, there should be few if any vacant lots or buildings in the area nominated. Streets should be connected and vibrant with public spaces nearby. Also consider the architecture of adjoining buildings, density, streetscape improvements, everyday activity level, Smart building codes, mixed zoning, design guidelines and how the street contributes to the local or area economy.

Public Spaces: Consider what makes the space you are nominating stand out over the others in the same city, or why one community's outstanding public spaces might stand above those in a neighboring community? Can the space be reached by public transportation, biking or walking, and is it accessible to persons with physical disabilities? Consider if the space is located adjacent to or in a downtown setting or neighborhood, if it is safe throughout the day and evening, and contributes to the local economy. Is the nominated space used not only for special events but also everyday activities? Different types of spaces are eligible for designation – plazas, pocket parks, public gardens, even buildings with public spaces (spaces with an admission charge are not eligible).
